“They always had lots of paper cuts on their hands because they were counting the sheets of paper.”

Clean Water

7 Do you know the reason why there were so many paper mills in Denny? It was 99 per cent of water at the start of the process, so it was the River Carron that was the attraction. There wasn't any point just being at the side of any river. It had to be a river with clean water. You couldn't make paper with dirty water. In latter years we had accreditation for producing paper that could be used in the food industry and obviously you couldn't have any bacteria or anything in the paper when it was touching food. So the real reason that there were so many paper mills was because of the River Carron and the quality of the water there.
