“It was good to listen to people instead of looking it up on the computer.”

Yellow edges

4 When I started in the mill I was only 15. So you had to start in what they called the ‘Cutter house’ that was down the basement. There were three machines and the big rolls of paper went on it and the machines cut the paper. So I had to stand in front of the machines and watch the paper coming down. I had to watch for any watermarks on the paper or if there was yellow edges down the side. I had to shout ‘Yellow edges’ and the cutter man on the machine had to stop the machine and sort. If there were yellow edges he had to sort, align the paper again.
